How much does it snow in Charlottesville?

I get this question often, so I figured better to answer it once at RealCentralVA.com.

"Just enough to be pretty, but then it melts pretty quickly so the city isn't stuck at home for days on end."

Ice storms. Lots of ice storms.

the amount isn't relevant... convey that people here don't know how to drive in ice, sleet, snow. They just think they can drive anytime.

 The problem isn't the snow, it's that our infrastructure fails when there is a significant storm of any kind.

 I tell them we get some, but not usually a lot. I usually illustrate with an example (an inch or less a few times a year, up to 6 inches once or twice), and then give the Snowmageddon caveat of what CAN happen :)

If they want to move here, then I tell them that we get a lot, mostly ice, and we lose power for days at a time.
